Friendship & Grace

I no longer call you slaves, because a slave does not know what his master is doing. I have called you friends, because I have told you everything I have heard from my Father.

-John 15:15-

When a good person becomes a friend, he becomes a good for his friend. Each of them loves what is good for himself, and repays in equal measure the wish and the pleasantness of his friend; for friendship is said to be equality. And this is true above all in the friendship of good people.

-Aristotle, Nichomachean Ethics-

This last weekend, one of my best Jesuit friends, Fr. Joseph Carver, was back in town from Missoula—where he now works as the Jesuit superior of Montana. He had returned to Seattle to help with a project that was dear to his heart, the Seattle Nativity School, and it was a too-rare grace to be with him, to minister at his side, and to share a meal and conversation with him. On Saturday morning, as I offered a presentation on Ignatian discernment for the board of the nascent Nativity School, it was wonderful to share ideas and enthusiasm with Joseph, to dream out-loud, with him and our other companions in mission, of a school that would offer the kind of education both he and I desire to see flourish: education charged with God's grace, encouraging of human excellence, transformative of individuals and of communities. In the midst of the group's discussion, I could sense how our friendship enlivened our dreams, and our shared dreams deepened our friendship. That night at dinner, speaking about the school, gossiping about the Society of Jesus, and reminiscing about our families—i.e., the wisdom of our fathers, the craziness of our siblings, the patience and humor of our mothers—I was again reminded of how much brighter our lives shine when they are fed by the fuel of friendship.

Such friendships are rare and wonderful, yet, perhaps they are more rare because we often have such a mistaken notion of the true nature of friendship. Though spoken of as valuable, friendship in our culture often seems to be treated as something purely personal—a private good, a prize I hold in my heart but which does not really intrude into my public self. Indeed, friendship is often portrayed as a hinderance to the general good and an undoing of justice: i.e., we see friendship as a merely emotional connection that keeps us from judging the world objectively and, thus, with fairness. In such a view, friendship has no moral content, but is about supporting whatever my friend does—it is about taking sides against others, about alliances and not about the good of the community. From this perspective, friendship, even when it is valued, is seen as a kind of bias that needs to be rooted out if one is to be moral; indeed, it is something to be left in the “private” zone, since it will poison one's moral capacity. Objectivity, detachment, distance: these are the qualities of a moral person, at least according to the rationalist tradition of our age.

But such a view of friendship is contrary, I think, to our own most important experiences; for what life shows us is that true friendship is not only the greatest of personal goods, but the grounding of all our moral courage, as well. Without a sense of true friendship, there would be no sacrifice, no heroism, no generosity beyond the strict calculus of justice. Though there can be times of testing—as when one who has had too much to drink says, “If you are my friend, you will give me my keys”—still, we know, that true friendship, more than our sense of justice, is what gives us the strength to do what is right for our friend. Far from simply taking the side of the other, friendship means loving that person enough to suffer, so that she might be good and receive the good, even when she doesn't understand it at the time. For this very reason, Aristotle notes that “the justice that is more just seems to belong to friendship.”

It is this sense of friendship that Jesus intended when he spoke to his disciples at the Last Supper. On the night before he died—as he broke the bread that was his body and shared the wine that was his blood—Jesus calls his disciples “friends,” not because he intends to do what they want, nor because he expects that they will understand all that he does; but because he desires for them the highest good, a good deeper than justice and reminiscent of the very nature of God. It is his friendship with them (and with us) on which Jesus builds his Church, because only friendship can energized the heart with something greater than guilt or duty, something that can accept the cross and rejoice at the resurrection. Far from being a bias, friendship is the power that unifies hearts and allows us to see beyond the wall of ego, into the life of our friend, into the promise of the Kingdom.

May we be blessed with a few such friends, and may we grow to become such friends, ourselves.

John

Visio Divina: Contemplating visual images to express our inner experiences

Friday, February 1, 2013 | 10:00 am – 3:00 pm
| St. Joseph Parish Center | Sue Magrath, facilitator

There are times when words fail us, when our inner experience becomes inexpressible except through the language of image. Powerful visual images can speak to us more clearly of God than any language we could hear or utter. Come and join us for a day of enrichment as we explore a variety of images and the ways in which we can use these images.

Cost is $40, $20 for students. To register, visit www.ignatiancenter.org or contact Carolyn Hickman at (206) 329-4824 x2. Sponsored by the Ignatian Spirituality Center.

An Evening with Archbishop Peter Sartain

Thursday, February 7, 2013 | 7:00-8:30 pm |
St. Joseph Church, Seattle

Many of us have read about our Seattle Archbishop in the news, but likely fewer of us have had the opportunity to listen to him in person. Join us for Archbishop Sartain's personal reflection on God's friendship, wisdom and love, as found in the call to follow Jesus.

Sponsored by the Ignatian Spirituality Center.

Communion for the Homebound

Eucharistic Ministers are available to bring Communion to the homebound. Please contact Fr. Jack O'Leary 206-965-1641 or Deacon Steve Wodzanowski at 206-965-1646 or steve@stjosephparish.org if you or someone you know would like to receive the Eucharist.

IN THE STEPS OF IGNATIUS: IGNATIAN SPIRITUALITY FOR MEN

I: The Ignatian Way: God in All Things

Saturday, February 9, 2013 | 8:30-11:30 am
| St. Joseph Church, Seattle | Gene Delmore, SJ & Ned Delmore, presenters; with guest panelists

Men of all ages and faith backgrounds are invited to come together for the first of three offerings of Ignatian spirituality especially for men. This first morning will include gathering with coffee and light breakfast between 8:30 am and 9:00 am, followed by presenters Gene Delmore, SJ and Ned Delmore, and guest panelists reflecting on what it means to "find God in all things" and be a "contemplative in action." There will be time for individual and group reflection on questions such as "Where is God in my life?" "How can I deepen my spirituality in my daily routine and busy schedule?" and "How does my faith guide my relationships, responsibilities and identities as a son, father, brother, partner, single person, friend, colleague, retiree, church-goer, or citizen?" Join other men interested in integrating spirituality into daily life!

Save the date for future events for men:

II: Ignatian Prayer: God Meets You Where You Are

Parish Blood Drive

Imagine Saving A Life

Every two minutes someone in Western Washington needs a blood transfusion. Help ensure this precious resource is available for ill and injured people in our community by giving blood through the Puget Sound Blood Center.

- Only 30% of the population is eligible at any given time to give blood
- Only 5% actually do
- There are 213 donors on the St Joseph's past participant list
- Average # of donors at each blood drive: 32

Over the holidays our inventory dropped by over 1,400 units- right now almost every blood type is below operational levels, meaning we have a less than 4 day supply. We need 900 donors per day to keep our inventory up, so a deficit of over 1,400 units of blood means it will take us several weeks (or more) of blood drives coming in at over 100% of their goal to rebuild our supply. If we had an additional 100 donors per day (making our daily collection goal 1,000 instead of 900) It would still take us two weeks (14 days) to get our inventory back to optimal levels. If we run into another winter storm like last year where businesses close and transportation virtually comes to a halt, it could really hurt us.

Monday, January 28th, in the Arrupe Room, Parish Center 1:00 to 3:00 and 3:45 to 7:00 pm.

Sign up in the vestibule following mass, or with Renée at rleet@stjosephparish.org. Invite a friend to join you!

Outrospection; The Need for Greater Empathy

A brief, thought-provoking YouTube video shares ideas about our 21st century need to develop greater empathy. It reflects on empathy's role as a powerful driver of social change, as with ending slavery in England. It suggests that our inadequate climate response is partly due to a failure of empathy for those in developing countries and for future generations. Search "outrospection" at youtube.com

St. Vincent de Paul Society

Back pain is no fun. And Jane required surgery to help repair a damaged disk in her spine. The pain caused her to stop working as a medical assistant. After a while, she lost her health insurance. With her three-year-old daughter, she lived in subsidized housing, received a $360 a month disability payment and $44 in food stamps—not very much.

The good news was surgery to correct her back pain went well. The problem was she needed a new bed with a stiffer mattress to help ensure her recovery went well. The broken down bed she slept in long since had seen its better days, and nights.

Thanks to the contributions you make to our St. Vincent de Paul collection the first Sunday of each month, we were able to get her a new bed and box spring. We even included a new set of sheets and pillow cases. Jane was very grateful—and so are we for your continued support.
