Over the Horizon

A ship is safe within a harbor, but that's not what ships are for.

-Anonymous-

Recently, while fiddling around on the internet, I discovered a fascinating map, which postulated what Seattle would look like were all the ice in the world to melt. In this map, University of Washington urban planner, Jeffrey Linn, imagines a 240 ft. rise in sea level, meaning that Capitol Hill becomes Capitol Island (though, thankfully, St. Joseph would be safe, fixed in the midst of the newly defined eastern Sound). Rising above the waters of Madison Bay, and just across University Reef from the Wedgwood Peninsula, we would be a beacon to the many new house boaters all around us. While I know the author of this map intended it as a fanciful exercise—a nod to global warming, in its most extreme form—the map led me to other thoughts: to questions about my life today, and about how much I live, already, atop an island on the edge of the sea. From the safe-harbor of St. Joseph, I may sail east to Bellevue or perhaps west to Ballard, and sometimes, when I feel adventurous, I may scurry south down the coast to Oregon or even California. But, for the most part, my heart remains close to shore, never venturing too far from the safety of my little island, never getting too far from the land.

Yet, when Jesus calls his disciples, he does not invite them into safe harbors or cozy bays; rather, he sends them out into the deep water, to look for the catch that awaits them—a catch only found amid stormy seas, in places neither snug nor safe. And when they find this catch, their safety is still not secured, for the very harvest they seek may endanger their boat, often being too large for them to handle on their own. Sent across the water, where the shore cannot be seen and the comfort of familiarity is all but lost, the disciple of Jesus must trust the One who has set the course, and to the barque in which she finds herself. She may not always be safe—the gospel doesn't guarantee that—but she will not be alone.

Ours is a God of the deep waters, a God of the ocean, windswept and wild, which spreads from horizon to horizon, drawing the fisherman far from the safety of his native shore. Teeming with the life that swims beneath her waves, the ocean offers every promise; yet surrounds the fisherman's tiny boat with a mystery and a power that brings fear, even as it inspires hope. Though he may find his way to islands and harbors he has never known, the fisherman—the disciple—can do so only by braving the big waters, by allowing his small craft to cross that first horizon and leave the security of his comfortable island.

This week, I have felt a bit like that hapless yet hopeful fisherman, called out to sea, when I would have preferred to remain in the more familiar waters of Puget Sound. Invited by the Jesuit Provincial to attend a meeting on the Society's social apostolate in North America, Central America, and the Caribbean, I realized that I had no idea why I had been invited: I do not speak Spanish or French (the first of second languages of many of the other participants); I have not been involved in any international ministries for the Jesuits in a long time; St. Joseph is not a bi-lingual parish, nor one particularly engaged in issues of migration, mineral extraction, gang violence, or the other subjects of the conference (except, perhaps, through our Sister Parish in El Salvador). Yet, still, I weighed anchor late last Saturday night—flying out on the red-eye from Sea-Tac, bound for the Dominican Republic, by way of Miami. Even as I loaded my bags into the plane and assumed my seat, I could imagine how Peter must have felt when Jesus, teaching from the boat along the shore, suddenly turned to him and said, “Put out for deep water, and let your nets down” (Luke 5:4). He had been preparing to head home, happy to work along the shore and even willing to let Jesus use his boat as a platform, but hesitant to go out to the deep waters, to head for unfamiliar shores. But, sometimes, you have to trust the One who asks, and go out into the mystery.

And, in that moment of faith, as is so often true, great things can happen; gifts, not always easy to receive or understand, can be discovered when we let ourselves leave the harbor and meet the Lord in wind and wave.

During my days, here in the Dominican Republic, I have not always felt comfortable, but I have known that I was called—not for myself, but for St. Joseph and for all of us. In the midst of lay and Jesuit partners involved in manifold works of human development and mercy, partners from Haiti and Mexico, from French and English Canada, from Cuba and Baltimore, from Milwaukee and Honduras, I have sometimes felt at sea, but I have never felt lost. For the waters that flow through the mountains of Central America, and are despoiled by mining or preserved by indigenous communities, are the same waters that encircle our little island of Seattle, and that lap against the port of St. Joseph. The forces that fragment families and increase violence in the Caribbean and Mexico are also at work among us, and among us exists the same need for healing and restorative justice. Whether it is the extraction of minerals in Guatemala or the transport of coal along the Columbia River, we are all part of the same forces—lands floating in a single great and holy sea, which binds us together more than it divides us. And when we let our hearts gaze over the horizon, we see not strangers, but the face of the Lord, the face of the Risen Christ, waiting for us to join him as workers and as friends.

So, I come back to Seattle a bit more of a sailor, laden with goods and graces for our community, given to me by our friends. It is good to have a home port, but may we all open our hearts to the sea.

First ReadingActs 5:27-32, 40B-41*

When the captain and the court officers had brought the apostles in and made them stand before the Sanhedrin, the high priest questioned them, "We gave you strict orders, did we not, to stop teaching in that name? Yet you have filled Jerusalem with your teaching and want to bring this man's blood upon us." But Peter and the apostles said in reply, "We must obey God rather than men. The God of our ancestors raised Jesus, though you had him killed by hanging him on a tree. God exalted him at his right hand as leader and savior to grant Israel repentance and forgiveness of sins. We are witnesses of these things, as is the Holy Spirit whom God has given to those who obey him."

The Sanhedrin ordered the apostles to stop speaking in the name of Jesus, and dismissed them. So they left the presence of the Sanhedrin, rejoicing that they had been found worthy to suffer dishonor for the sake of the name.

Responsorial Psalm*Psalm 30*

Second ReadingRevelation 5:11-14*

I, John, looked and heard the voices of many angels—who surrounded the throne and the living creatures and the elders. They were countless in number, and they cried out in a loud voice: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power and riches, wisdom and strength, honor and glory and blessing." Then I heard every creature in heaven and on earth and under the earth and in the sea, everything in the universe, cry out: "To the one who sits on the throne and to the Lamb be blessing and honor, glory and might, forever and ever." The four living creatures answered, "Amen," and the elders fell down and worshiped.

Gospel

John 21:1-14

At that time, Jesus revealed himself to his disciples at the Sea of Tiberias. He revealed himself in this way. Together were Simon Peter, Thomas called Didymus, Nathanael from Cana in Galilee, Zebedee's sons, and two others of his disciples. Simon Peter said to them, "I am going fishing." They said to him, "We also will come with you." So they went out and got into the boat, but that night they caught nothing. When it was already dawn, Jesus was standing on the shore; but the disciples did not realize that it was Jesus. Jesus said to them, "Children, have you caught anything to eat?" They answered him, "No." So he said to them, "Cast the net over the right side of the boat and you will find something." So they cast it, and were not able to pull it in because of the number of fish. So the disciple whom Jesus loved said to Peter, "It is the Lord." When Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he tucked in his garment, for he was lightly clad, and jumped into the sea. The other disciples came in the boat, for they were not far from shore, only about a hundred yards, dragging the net with the fish. When they climbed out on shore, they saw a charcoal fire with fish on it and bread. Jesus said to them, "Bring some of the fish you just caught." So Simon Peter went over and dragged the net ashore full of one hundred fifty-three large fish. Even though there were so many, the net was not torn. Jesus said to them, "Come, have breakfast." And none of the disciples dared to ask him, "Who are you?" because they realized it was the Lord. Jesus came over and took the bread and gave it to them, and in like manner the fish. This was now the third time Jesus was revealed to his disciples after being raised from the dead.

Celebrate Mercy

Lord Jesus Christ,
you have taught us to be merciful,
as the heavenly Father is merciful.
Help us to celebrate your mercy:
by loving the world as you love,
by walking the way of your cross,
by living as women and men bound for resurrection.
May the love you revealed in the emptiness of the cross, bring us the fullness of hope.
May the mercy you offer in your body and blood,
nourish us in mercy for others.
May the glory of God you receive in the wonder of the Resurrection, bring us all to communion with you who live and reign with the Father, in the unity of the Holy Spirit,
one God forever and ever.
Amen.

St. Vincent de Paul Georgetown warehouse

Saturday, April 23rd 10:00am – 2:00pm

Work Site address is: 5950 4th Ave S

St. Vincent de Paul in Seattle and King County is made up of more than 50 conferences—"all-volunteer neighborhood support groups" who make personal in-home visits and personal contacts to help people with survival and self-sufficiency support. Our neighborhood volunteers are the heart, soul, and face of our organization. We would not exist without them. Their approach to working with people who are suffering and need help is unique. Each conference has a group of members who gather to serve people who need help in their area. These visits help determine the exact nature and detail of the assistance required to help our neighbors. We annually serve close to 150,000 people in home visits, case management, food bank, and related programs. Every year we know our service plays a major role in helping to prevent evictions, all of which are expensive personal and financial tragedies. Costs getting someone back into a home after an eviction are substantial and can amount to between $13,000 and $40,000 per year according to research done by the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Work Description: Volunteers will assist in sorting incoming clothing donations.

Number of Volunteers needed: 15-30 - ages 21 & older. We are specifically targeting Young Adults to participate in this service. Pizza lunch to follow.
