FIRST COMMUNION
You Belong in the Revolution

To Christians, the future does have a name, and its name is Hope. Feeling hopeful does not mean to be optimistically naïve and ignore the tragedy humanity is facing. Hope is the virtue of a heart that doesn’t lock itself into darkness, that doesn’t dwell on the past, does not simply get by in the present, but is able to see a tomorrow. Hope is the door that opens onto the future. . . . A single individual is enough for hope to exist, and that individual can be you. And then there will be another “you,” and another “you,” and it turns into an “us.” And so, does hope begin when we have an “us?” No. Hope began with one “you.” When there is an “us,” there begins a revolution: the revolution of tenderness. And what is tenderness? It is the love that comes close and becomes real. It is a movement that starts from our heart and reaches the eyes, the ears, and the hands.

-Pope Francis-

I was late, as usual, and they were already coming up from the beach by the time I was making it down the path. I could hear them far off: that unmistakable noise of young women and men, still filled with the enthusiasm of childhood and yet with voices that already bore some of the depth and resonance of adults. And though I was tired and stiff from the four-hour drive, I couldn’t help but smile as they came into view—wet and dirty, laughing and moaning in that way indicative not of real pain, but of that still-not-forgotten desire for someone to pick them up and carry them, as they had been carried by their mothers or fathers so many years before. Some lit up when they saw my camera, grabbing a friend and smiling with a joy that belied the misting weather. Others, with feigned sullenness, waited to be coaxed or cajoled into the picture they hoped would make the end-of-the-year show. Though some show the early symptoms of our social diseases—fear, worry, selfishness—still, like the ferns and young trees, that were a growing part of the natural environment, pushing up towards the light past the old logs and faded timber that surrounded them: hope shining in the midst of the wood, undistracted by the technology they had been forced to leave behind, and simply, noisily present to each other and to the world.

Spending the evening in a muddy field around a smoky fire with the kindergarteners I had first encountered when I arrived at St. Joseph and the adults who would, in far too short a time, be going off to high school and to college. Though some show the early symptoms of our social diseases—fear, worry, selfishness—still, they have not yet gone mad, and for the most part remain open to each other, open to the “you” that each one is, and to the “us” they are together. Their intrinsic Hope, enhanced by their unfamiliar, technology-free environment, showed itself that evening, and proved that it had not yet been driven from them by consumption or bullying, by the tyranny of “body image” or the cruel isolation that comes from “popularity.” Set apart from Snapchat and Instagram, they could laugh out loud, instead of “LOL”-ing, and they could steal each other’s s’mores or share each other’s blankets. They were overly rambunctious at times, and could be annoying (at least to the old man with the camera). But to one another, they were present. And they were tender. And they were a promise of the revolution that will come.

The next day, back in Seattle and freed from the mud and noise of shouting tweens, I went to the Blue Dress Breakfast—a fashion show and fundraiser for the Society of St. Vincent de Paul. Entering the Campion Ballroom at Seattle University, I smiled at how different it seemed from that muddy campsite in Forks. Instead of the screams and giggles of youngsters, there rose from the greying crowd only a rumble of voices, as old friends introduced new colleagues, and the “movers and shakers” and the “worker bees” went to their respective places at the center of the room or on its fringes. Though not all in the room had been to this breakfast before, they all had the look of experienced campaigners—people who had sat at many a meal, waiting for the invitation to write their check, and willing to do their duty.

As I settled in behind the traditional bowl of mixed fruit and cup of watery coffee, I was feeling happy that so many people were there, and was ready to check yet another event off of my very long list of “to-do’s.” Then, turning towards the front, I began to watch the video of a Tlinget woman, Leah, who had become homeless in the Seattle area and had lived in her car for two years, while caring for her son and holding down a minimum wage job. Not even her supervisor knew she was homeless, since she arrived each morning looking clean and clear, with an attitude both positive and helpful to others. Speaking into the camera, Leah told of wanting to pass on her culture to her son, and wanting to give him the safety and dignity she had not always felt. Suddenly, I was taken back to the recent TED talk by Pope Francis, who spoke of his immigrant family in Argentina, and recalled, “I could have very well ended up among today’s ‘discarded’ people. And that’s why I ask myself, deep in my heart: ‘Why them and not me?’”

Looking around the room, I saw that I was not the only person caught up in Leah’s story, and when she was introduced, the eruption in the room brought me back not just to the Pope’s talk, but to those seventh graders, gathered in the misty woods. As with those young people, there was suddenly a community in that vast room—a community bound by compassion and no longer separated by status or position, by wealth or power. In a moment of tenderness, the structures that so often “nullify our desire to open up to the good,” fell apart, and the revolution began. Through the grace of this particular woman—through her honesty and dignity—we began to turn towards each other and away from our world-weary complacency; we began to find hope that our world could be reshaped through our work, through our solidarity with this woman and with each other. We found, again, our own intrinsic tenderness, and recognized that, old and grey as we may sometimes feel, we can still become part of the revolution.

This weekend, the People of God at St. Joseph will gather to welcome 70 young girls and boys to the altar of Christ—to welcome them to their first Communion. They come to this Sacrament, like all of us, not because they are worthy, but because they are loved. They come because God chose to embrace weakness instead of power and majesty; because the Son of God emptied himself of all dignity and distance to become as we are—indeed, to become the least of us, accepting a death reserved only for the most despised among our kind. Jesus, the Son of God, who existed before the world began, turned the world upside-down, by looking out and seeing each one of us with eyes of tenderness and love. He came to us, so that we could come to him; he became our food and drink, so that our bodies—as well as our spirits—might pulse with his love and be filled with his presence. In becoming present to each of these children, he affirms what they already know—but which the world too often leads them to forget—that each one of us is beloved, that Hope is our destiny and our birthright, that all of us together are the true body of Christ, alive in the world. You—each of these children is called to know, each of us is called to remember—you are given the grace to make right the world, to bring about the revolution of tenderness. You belong in the revolution.

First Reading
Then Peter stood up with the Eleven, raised his voice, and proclaimed: "Let the whole house of Israel know for certain that God has made both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom you crucified."

Now when they heard this, they were cut to the heart, and they asked Peter and the other apostles, "What are we to do, my brothers?" Peter said to them, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For the promise is made to you and to your children and to all those far off, whomever the Lord our God will call." He testified with many other arguments, and was exhorting them, "Save yourselves from this corrupt generation." Those who accepted his message were baptized, and about three thousand persons were added that day.

Responsorial Psalm

Psalm 23

Lord you are my shepherd; there is nothing I shall want.
Fresh and green are the pastures where you give me repose.
Near restful waters you lead me, to revive my drooping spirit.
You guide me along the right path; you are true to your name.
If I should walk in the valley of darkness no evil would I fear.
You are there with your crook and your staff; with these you give me comfort.
You have prepared a banquet for me in the sight of my foes.
My head you have anointed with oil; my cup is overflowing.
Surely goodness and kindness shall follow me all the days of my life.
In the Lord's own house shall I dwell for ever and ever.

Second Reading
Beloved: If you are patient when you suffer for doing what is good, this is a grace before God. For to this you have been called, because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example that you should follow in his footsteps. He committed no sin, and no deceit was found in his mouth.

When he was insulted, he returned no insult; when he suffered, he did not threaten; instead, he handed himself over to the one who judges justly. He himself bore our sins in his body upon the cross, so that, free from sin, we might live for righteousness. By his wounds you have been healed. For you had gone astray like sheep, but you have now returned to the shepherd and guardian of your souls.
Jesus said: "Amen, amen, I say to you, whoever does not enter a sheepfold through the gate but climbs over elsewhere is a thief and a robber. But whoever enters through the gate is the shepherd of the sheep. The gatekeeper opens it for him, and the sheep hear his voice, as the shepherd calls his own sheep by name and leads them out. When he has driven out all his own, he walks ahead of them, and the sheep follow him, because they recognize his voice. But they will not follow a stranger; they will run away from him, because they do not recognize the voice of strangers." Although Jesus used this figure of speech, the Pharisees did not realize what he was trying to tell them.

So Jesus said again, "Amen, amen, I say to you, I am the gate for the sheep. All who came before me are thieves and robbers, but the sheep did not listen to them. I am the gate. Whoever enters through me will be saved, and will come in and go out and find pasture. A thief comes only to steal and slaughter and destroy; I came so that they might have life and have it more abundantly."

(5:30) The King Of Love My Shepherd Is  St. Columba

Welcome First Communicants

“He tells us that the world will recognize the disciples of Jesus by the way they love one another. Love, in other words, is the Christian’s identity card, the only valid “document” identifying us as Christians. It is the only valid document. If this card expires and is not constantly renewed, we stop being witnesses of the Master. So I ask you: ‘Do you wish to say yes to Jesus’ invitation to be his disciples?’”

Paint The Church Update

Many, many thanks to all who have made gifts and pledges to our “Paint & Repair St. Joseph appeal. To date, we have received 96 pledges totaling $1,026,125.41 (which includes 32 gifts that were matched for a total of $81,000) toward our goal of $1,605,000. We are endlessly grateful for your commitment to St. Joseph Parish!

If you haven’t yet given, please prayerfully consider what, if any, gift you are able to give to help paint & repair the church!
Introduction
Our beautiful art-deco Church with its bell tower has served us well since it was built in 1929. Through the generosity of many over several years, the interior needs of our church building have largely been taken care of. The pews were replaced, the altar was reconfigured, new lighting was installed, and many of our stained glass windows were repaired and protected. However, the exterior of our church is showing the ravages of the Northwest weather.

Repair of the St. Cecilia and Coronation of Mary Stained Glass Windows
These beautiful works of art are two of the most visible, valuable, and beloved components of our house of worship: the St. Cecilia rose window, a hallmark of the main church entry on 18th Avenue, and the Coronation of Mary window situated above the Mary mosaic in the northeast corner of the church and visible from 19th Avenue.

Pieces of colored glass in the window are currently very vulnerable, due to lack of adequate support bars and the failing lead connecting strips and solder joints. To preserve the windows, they need to be removed and taken to a professional studio, where they will be re-leded with new strips and new solder joints. The window sashes will be inspected, scraped, painted, and fixed. New properly vented protective glass will be installed on the exterior side of the windows.

Estimated Cost for Repair: $250,000
Painting and Restoration of Church Exterior

The Church was last painted 25 years ago and without the protection of a new coat of paint, the exterior walls will erode, resulting in very expensive damage. Cleaning, repairing, and restoring of terra cotta joints is also clearly needed, as well as the removal and replacement of failed caulk at windows, and attention to the 5 spots in the roof that leak. Painting a church as large as ours is no easy task. Scaffolding must be installed so workers can safely reach the highest points (10 stories up on 19TH Ave). As with any paint job, old paint will need to be scraped, walls repaired where needed, and prepped for painting.

Estimated Cost: $1,095,000

Repair of Bell Tower Roof
Membrane and Lighting

The Project: While the Bell Tower itself was structurally reinforced during the centennial campaign, we now need to address several issues. Torch down roofing needs to be replaced, access points need to be made safe, and the lighting of the tower needs attention.

Estimated Cost: $100,000
Replace Outdated Boiler Controls

The Project: We need to replace outdated boiler control systems and air draft dampers, original building fans need new bearings, we need to add new steam valves for increased energy efficiency and ability to heat or cool specific areas within the system, and we need to replace or repair radiators in the Church classrooms.

Estimated Cost: $100,000

Replace the Parish Bus

Our parish bus is used nearly every day. From providing transportation for seniors to and from Mass, to senior and youth group outings, to CYO sport teams, to transporting homeless men to our overflow shelter nights October through April, we rely heavily on our bus. Our current bus is a 15-seat 1999 Chevy Express which has increasingly had mechanical issues which require frequent repairs. Estimated Cost: $60,000 – used; $90,000 – new

Total Estimated Cost for Phase One: $1,605,000

Rosary Honoring the 100th Anniversary of the Fatima Marian Apparitions

We are living in troubling times when prayers for God’s guidance are needed. The Rosary has nourished the faith of many Catholics and Christians. Pope Francis has encouraged us to pray the Rosary as a way to meditate on the lives of Jesus and Mary. May 13th is the 100th Anniversary of Blessed Mother’s appearance to three children in Fatima, Portugal where she urged the world to pray the Rosary daily. If you would like to learn how to pray this powerful prayer please join us Monday, May 8th at 7:00 pm in the Church. Rosaries will be provided. Refreshments and conversation after.
