May the eyes of your hearts be enlightened, that you may know what is the hope that belongs to his call, what are the riches of glory in his inheritance among the holy ones, and what is the surpassing greatness of his power for us who believe, in accord with the exercise of his great might, which he worked in Christ, raising him from the dead and seating him at his right hand in the heavens.

Blessed Be Those Who Have Given To Us Their Last Full Measure of Devotion
He Must Decrease, We Must Increase

Otherworldliness can be a real temptation in the religion, but the Incarnation itself is a corrective. Down to earth, real flesh and blood. And even at feasts such as the Ascension, which might seem otherworldly, the scripture texts for the day are anything but: “Why stand ye gazing up into heaven?” (Jn. 1:11, KJV). As if to say, take a look around; your work is here!

-Kathleen Norris-

In the closing days of the old dispensation, when the last of the prophets stood on the shores of the Jordan, calling the People of Israel to repentance and baptism, he looked upon the stranger from Nazareth, and he saw the Word made flesh, the One for whom he had been waiting: “Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world!” (Jn. 1:29). A short time later, questioned by his own disciples, John went further, saying of Jesus: “This joy of mine has been made complete. He must increase; I must decrease” (Jn. 3:30). It is the last testimony given by John the Baptist, and it marks a transformative moment in salvation history: when all the promises given through Abraham and Moses, Isaiah and Jeremiah come to fruition, when at last God’s promise to redeem humanity is fulfilled in a single person. In Jesus the fullness of God’s presence enters the world and becomes united with the fullness of humanity. No longer aliens or strangers, no longer even the chosen People of the Covenant, we are now inseparably united with God— sharers in the same family, in the same DNA—through Christ Jesus, the Son of Mary, and the one who lives and dies just as we all must do. In Jesus, the old call to worship and sacrifice is replaced by a new call to discipleship: for Christ himself has become our sacrifice, and he now stands as the union with the Father, the like of which we could never attain through our own actions. Thus, for all of us, “He must increase; I must decrease."

And yet, if Jesus himself is now the One in whom all our hopes lie—if he, in his own person, unites us to God—why does he leave us? Doesn’t the departure of Jesus just put us back in the same boat, worshipping someone whom we cannot see, someone removed from us in heaven? Although it may be nice to have “one of our own” inside the Godhead, wouldn’t it be better if he was here, running this still apparently not-yet-fully-redeemed world in which we all remain? If in his death and resurrection, Jesus overcomes the power of death—demonstrating the power of love and sacrifice, as well as God’s complete communion with the One who loves—then I want him to remain here on earth. I want him to use that power and communion with God to heal the divisions caused by race and creed, by fear and anger; I want him to rule with justice and compassion, instead of the selfishness and brutality that surrounds us; I want him to ensure that the poor have medical care and that the goods of the earth are distributed with equity. I want Jesus himself is now the One in whom all our hopes lie—if he, in his own person, unites us to God—why does he leave us? Doesn’t the departure of Jesus just put us back in the same boat, worshipping someone whom we cannot see, someone removed from us in heaven? Although it may be nice to have “one of our own” inside the Godhead, wouldn’t it be better if he was here, running this still apparently not-yet-fully-redeemed world in which we all remain? If in his death and resurrection, Jesus overcomes the power of death—demonstrating the power of love and sacrifice, as well as God’s complete communion with the One who loves—then I want him to remain here on earth. I want him to use that power and communion with God to heal the divisions caused by race and creed, by fear and anger; I want him to rule with justice and compassion, instead of the selfishness and brutality that surrounds us; I want him to ensure that the poor have medical care and that the goods of the earth are distributed with equity. I want him to follow Jesus and serve him in a world where he overturns the power of death by his power of life, and where the devil, in all its forms, is on the run. Isn’t that what the resurrection promises: all of us serving in the Kingdom of Christ?

Wanting all this, I feel a little bit like that disciple, standing with Jesus on the Mountain of the Ascension, who asks: “Lord, are you at this time going to restore the kingdom to Israel?” (Acts, 1:6) And like that disciple, I suffer more than a bit of disappointment when, in answer to my question, I am left looking up at the sky, wondering, “Where did you go?”

Though we may be too used to celebrating this feast to feel fully its power, the Ascension should disappoint anyone who wishes that Jesus would just get on with healing the world and finally save us from ourselves. And if we are disappointed, how much more so must have been those first disciples, just getting used to the presence of their resurrected Lord, who suddenly realized that they were alone again, and that the promises of the Kingdom still seemed a long way off.

So, then, why does Jesus leave?

The answer, it seems, goes back to John the Baptist, and his response to those asking him about the new prophet, Jesus: “He must increase; I must decrease.” In ascending to God, Jesus—as an individual—ceases to be the person to whom we must look to do everything for us. In gazing after him, we are simply peering up at the sky, and, like those disciples on the mountain, we soon realize that such passive adoration is not really our mission. Rather, we are called not just to worship Jesus, but to become as he is: i.e., to become women and men filled with the Holy Spirit and empowered to proclaim good news to the world, even at the cost of our own lives. Jesus, the man raised from the dead by the power of God, decreases, so that the Spirit of Jesus might increase in each one of us.

The Ascension begins a transformation in salvation history as great as the one that began on the banks of the Jordan. For in the Ascension we see that Jesus came not to rescue us from ourselves, but to transform us into the image of himself. We are left behind in this world because the mission of Jesus involves more than just establishing himself as the Christ; i.e. the anointed one. The mission of Jesus is more than his personal mission: it is a mission to proclaim and begin the anointing of the whole world—the transformation of the entire world into the body of Christ. And only when Jesus completes his mission in the flesh can we take up that mission, our mission, in the Spirit. Only when he ceases to be, exclusively, the Messiah, can the messianic age begin; only when he ascends and is no longer the visible body of Christ for the world can the whole world become that body, that Christ. As Jesus was anointed by the Spirit at the Jordan—thus entering into his mission as the Christ, the Anointed One—so we, as his followers, must be anointed with the same Spirit. At Pentecost, we must be “Christ-ed,” anointed in a way that allows us to become what Jesus promises we shall be, what St. Paul recognizes when he calls us: “the church, which is his body, the fullness of the one who fills all things in every way.” In this fulfillment, by which Jesus, the individual, decreases so that the body of Christ might increase, Jesus finds the same joy John described at the end of his ministry, the joy Jesus foresaw at the last supper, when he told his disciples, “I tell you this that my joy may be in you and that your joy might be complete” (Jn 15:11).

So it is that the world, redeemed through Jesus, will not come to the fullness of its redemption by him, alone, but by the Spirit of Jesus, the Holy Spirit alive in each of us individually and in all of us together—alive, that is, in the fullness of Church. This is the joy that Jesus has given to us, a joy that makes us one with him not as his subjects, but as his friends. We are called to become, by our adoption in the Spirit, what Jesus was by his Incarnation: the living presence of God, by which the world and all that is in it, are returned to God in love.

On this Memorial Day weekend, when we recall the many who have laid down their lives for their friends—i.e., for us and for our liberties—we must take to heart the lesson of the Ascension and the blessed responsibility entrusted to us. We must stop looking at the sky for answers that are already planted in our hearts and in our minds by the Spirit who brought Jesus from death to life. We must begin to take up our part in the redemption of the world: raising up the poor and disheartened, healing the sick and the lonely, freeing the prisoner and rescuing the terrorist from his sins, laying down our lives with the certainty that death has no power over us since we have been raised with Jesus to life.

It is we who are the anointed, who live in communion with God through the gift of Christ Jesus, and who are called now to redeem the world. Not with armies nor with missiles will this redemption come, but with every act of kindness to a stranger, every blessing given in water or food to a refugee. This redemption comes when we place our bodies in the way of war and violence, when we resist the merchandising of arms across the earth and the reductions of medical care to the poor and aged. Redemption comes when we welcome life in the womb by caring for a mother in her fear, and when we hold the hand of someone dying until they pass to God in peace. Redemption comes when we live in the fidelity of our commitments—loving our spouse in everyday ways, forgiving with openness and listening with care. Redemption comes in the mercy that sets a place at the table of Christ for all women and men, especially those who need it most, those struggling and hungry for companionship and love. Redemption comes whenever we recognize, in ourselves and our community, the image of Jesus, who has called us to be Christ.

Hail the Day That Sees Him Rise

1. Hail the day that sees him rise, Al-le-lu-ia!
2. There for him the triumph waits; Al-le-lu-ia!
3. Still, for us he intercedes, Al-le-lu-ia!
4. There we shall with him remain, Al-le-lu-ia!

To his throne above the skies; Al-le-lu-ia!
Lift your heads, eternal gates; Al-le-lu-ia!
His prevailing death he pleads; Al-le-lu-ia!
Partners of his endless reign; Al-le-lu-ia!

Christ, awhile to mortals given, Al-le-lu-ia!
He has conquered death and sin; Al-le-lu-ia!
Near himself prepares our place, Al-le-lu-ia!
There his face unclouded see, Al-le-lu-ia!

Re-ascends his native heaven, Al-le-lu-ia!
Take the King of glory in! Al-le-lu-ia!
He, the first fruits of our race, Al-le-lu-ia!
Live with eternally, Al-le-lu-ia!

First Reading
In the first book, Theophilus, I dealt with all that Jesus did and taught until the day he was taken up, after giving instructions through the Holy Spirit to the apostles whom he had chosen. He presented himself alive to them by many proofs after he had suffered, appearing to them during forty days and speaking about the kingdom of God. While meeting with the them, he enjoined them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for "the promise of the Father about which you have heard me speak; for John baptized with water, but in a few days you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit."

When they had gathered together they asked him, "Lord, are you at this time going to restore the kingdom to Israel?" He answered them, "It is not for you to know the times or seasons that the Father has established by his own authority. But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes upon you, and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, throughout Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth." When he had said this, as they were looking on, he was lifted up, and a cloud took him from their sight. While they were looking intently at the sky as he was going, suddenly two men dressed in white garments stood beside them. They said, "Men of Galilee, why are you standing there looking at the sky? This Jesus who has been taken up from you into heaven will return in the same way as you have seen him going into heaven."

Responsorial Psalm
Sing praise to our king, sing praise: for God is king of all the earth.

All peoples clap your hands. Cry to God with shouts of joy! For the Lord, the Most High, is awesome, the great king over all the earth.

God goes up with shouts of joy, the Lord goes up with trumpet blast. Sing praise for God, sing praise! Sing praise to our king, sing praise!

Second Reading
Brothers and sisters: May the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, give you a Spirit of wisdom and revelation resulting in knowledge of him. May the eyes of your hearts be enlightened, that you may know what is the hope that belongs to his call, what are the riches of glory in his inheritance among the holy ones, and what is the surpassing greatness of his power for us who believe, in accord with the exercise of his great might, which he worked in Christ, raising him from the dead and seating him at his right hand in the heavens, far above every principality, authority, power, and dominion, and every name that is named not only in this age but also in the one to come. And he put all things beneath his feet and gave him as head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of the one who fills all things in every way.

Gospel Acclamation
Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia.

Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia.
Gospel

The eleven disciples went to Galilee, to the mountain to which Jesus had ordered them. When they saw him, they worshiped, but they doubted. Then Jesus approached and said to them, "All power in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you. And behold, I am with you always, until the end of the age."

Communion Songs

Be Not Afraid

You shall cross the barren desert, but you shall not die of thirst.
You shall wander far in safety, though you do not know the way.
You shall speak your words in foreign lands, and all will understand,
You shall see the face of God and live. Refrain

If you pass through raging waters in the sea, you shall not drown.
If you walk amidst the burning flames, you shall not be harmed.
If you stand before the pow'r of hell and death is at your side, know that I am with you, through it all. Refrain

Blessed are your poor, for the Kingdom shall be theirs.
Blest are you that weep and mourn for one day you shall laugh.
And if wicked ones insult and hate you, all because of me,
Blessed, blessed are you! Refrain

Come, follow me, and I will give you rest.

For many of us, whether long-time parishioners or recent arrivals, walking through the doors of St. Joseph Church lifts our hearts and ignites our senses. For some entering the church brings back memories of events lived in this space—of First Communions and Confirmations, of Weddings and Funerals, and even of Ordinations—but even for those who have just begun to form such memories, this church vibrates with the hum of 87 years of grace-filled moments, and offers a peace and holiness that is palpable. More than a concrete box with pretty windows, St. Joseph is a repository of memory and presence, a promise that all women and men may come into the “Domus Dei” the house of God and be lifted up with tenderness, fed with hospitality and hope, sheltered by compassion and mercy. And with its tower, rising into the sky, this building proclaims to the outside world that we—the beloved people of God—are here to welcome and to celebrate with all who come through the door.

If you have not yet given to our Campaign to Paint and Repair the Church, I hope you will consider your own memories of St. Joseph, or your own hopes for a future here. Help us keep this beautiful space as welcoming and beautiful as what we have received.

In Christ,

John D. Whitney, SJ

Our Neighbors From Iraq: What’s Up & How You Can Help

In March, St. Joseph welcomed a wonderful family into the house formerly occupied by the Sisters of the Holy Name. Since then, if you come to the 9:00 am Mass, you may have met Ali, the father of the family, or Zaid (7), his elder son—who is also enrolled at St. Joseph School. Zaid’s younger brother, Hassan (3), and mother, Dihlal, also come to St. Joseph when possible, though, as many of you know, taking care of a 3 year old can be a handful. Though the family is not Catholic, they were part of the diverse culture of Baghdad, and as Ali’s grandfather says, “Our faiths have different buildings, but it’s the same God.”

Ali is currently enrolled in ESL classes, and hoping to get into a program for nurse’s training and certification in the US, since he worked as a nurse before coming here. Meanwhile, because Dihlal needs to stay home to take care of Hassan, we are creating a schedule for ESL lessons in the home for her, as well as play-dates for her youngest son.

The gratitude and grace with which this family has become part of St. Joseph is a blessing to us, just as they have said we are a blessing to them. (That’s the thing about grace, it always seems to spread out over all those involved.)

A current and pressing need. . . is for an automobile for the family. Ali would like to purchase a reliable and sturdy vehicle—hopefully at a good price. Doing his research, he is especially seeking a Volvo, Toyota, or Honda—with enough room to carry the family. If you can help with this search, or if you have a car to sell/donate, please contact Dave Spicer (206-229-7568) or call the Parish Center.

God has blessed us with these new friends. If you see them, say hello. Though we may not (yet) speak much of the same language, we are increasingly sharing one heart. Thank you to all who have helped, and to all at St. Joseph.

May is Mental Health Awareness Month

Mental illnesses are far more common than cancer, diabetes, heart disease or arthritis. Our faith communities can be an important part of the recovery process through education, support and by helping individuals and families feel part of a caring community.

Key findings from data gathered by the US Dept. of Health & Human Services) include “the percent increase in suicide rates (in 2014) for females was greatest for those aged 10–14, and for males, those aged 45–64.”

Nevertheless She Persisted: Women Who Said Yes to Their Call

June 1 from 7:00-9:00 PM - St. Joseph Parish Center

Please join us and our guest panelists, Victoria Reis, Susan Decker, Diane Lostrangio & Anna Johnson, for an evening of reflection. By this point in our series we have heard about women who have persisted in the face of adversity and yet remain faithful to God’s call. In our final evening we will hear from women today who are responding to the needs of our time. We hope to create a space in which you can continue to listen to in what ways is God calling you to say Yes!

Please arrive early as parking will be scarce. When you come early, you can enjoy food and refreshments.
Liturgy and Worship

Prayer Tree

St. Joseph Community extends its prayers and hopes for the following intentions: For the survivors and those injured at a young people’s concert from a terrorist’s explosion . . . Gratitude for the those who responded to this emergency: First Responders; those who opened their homes for shelter and safety; those who used social media to let families know their children and young adults were safe; the cab drivers who gave free rides; and many others whose hearts of courage were braver and stronger than fear . . . For the men and women who protect us, may God bless them and their commitment of service.

“. . . When a father, mother, a brother, sister or a child dies
Their hearts live in those who have Loved them . . . .”

School Openings

As happens from time to time, we still have a few spaces open in select grades for the coming 2017-18 school year. As we enter the season when many families are moving into Seattle, this is a good time to let people know who we are and what we represent. Specifically, if you know of or learn of families looking to place their children in kindergarten, first grade, third grade or sixth grade, please let them know about all that St. Joseph School offers. You are the best marketing tool we have. Please call 206.329.3260 for more information.
Ascension

In the center of the south side of the nave of St. Joseph is the window of the Ascension, part of those which capture the Glorious Mysteries of Jesus’ life. The panels of this window reveal much of this mystery of faith.

The Trinity: The symbol of the Trinity, towards which Jesus looks, is the ancient symbol of threes-within-threes within one: the triple, intersecting circles (for the three persons), overlain by the equilateral triangle (symbol of the Father), within a single circle (for the oneness of the Godhead). From this pour forth rays of every color, as signs of grace, which are echoed in the dawn over the city and the halo around Jesus.

The Ascending Christ: His wounded hands still visible, Jesus looks to the place of his origin and destiny in this window. One may note the bare feet, like Moses who was called to take off his shoes on holy ground. Jesus rises above the city of Jerusalem, in the dawning light of the new day—a sign of what is to come in the rising of the Church, the new Jerusalem.

The Apostles: In Acts, it is not all the disciples, but the Apostles who witness the Ascension; and this window depicts this gathering. Mary, who will be at Pentecost but may have already seen her Son leave once, is not pictured. The three look up at the heavens in various poses depicting a desire to have Jesus stay, and prayerful acceptance or sorrow. Note that they, unlike Jesus, wear sandals—appropriate for the mission to the world they are given.
