The Danish Example

Christian policemen, shopkeepers, and teachers
Tell their friends of the quickening storm
While students on bicycles race through the streets
Searching for Jews to be warns
And Katlev the foreman blurs out to the trainman
"My family has no place to hide"
"Well bring 'em to my house," the stranger replies
"And we'll spit in the damn Nazi's eyes"

-Fred Small, “Denmark 1943”-

In 1963, with the publication of “Eichmann in Jerusalem,” the great social philosopher, Hannah Arendt, offered a unique account of the 1961 trial of Adolf Eichmann, one of the principal figures in the execution of Hitler’s plan for a “final solution to the Jewish problem.” As aide to Heinrich Himmler, Eichmann had organized and coordinated the deportation and subsequent execution of millions of Jews in both the Reich itself and in the nations occupied by the German armies during World War II; yet, he had escaped the Nuremberg trials after the war by fleeing to Argentina, where he lived hidden in the large German immigrant community. Discovered in the early 1960’s by those charged with uncovering former Nazis, Eichmann was taken by agents of the Israeli government and brought to Jerusalem to stand trial for genocide. Arendt, hired by The New Yorker to cover the trial, sees in Eichmann a paradigm of modern evil: i.e., not a passionate murderer, but a boring, bourgeois bureaucrat, who does what is asked of him without moral qualm or conscience. In her account of the trial—which includes details of the various deportations Eichmann oversaw—Eichmann is not a fearsome monster, but a highly efficient assistant of those in command, one who loved to please his superiors, to keep his records straight and his timetables in place, and who was proud of the machine-like way he had organized a system in which (almost as an aside) millions of people were sent to their death. Refuting the notion that evil always appears as something monstrous, Arendt subtitled her work, "A Report on the Banality of Evil”—making it an indictment not just of Eichmann, but of the thousands of “middle managers,” who often assisted Eichmann’s activities, under the aegis of solving the problems of “undesirable” stateless or minority peoples residing in their countries, and of the ordinary citizens who simply accepted the rule of law, even when that law happened to include mass deportations of aliens and others. Too concerned with the banality of their own lives, and too accustomed to relying on the norms of society for their moral center, these men and women willingly killed no one, yet became complicit in the death of millions.

In some countries—e.g., Ukraine, Poland, France—Eichmann used traditional prejudices to polarize the community and to draw otherwise responsible people into acts of unspeakable horror. The “stateless” Jews—i.e., those who had been stripped of their status as citizens in Germany—were especially vulnerable targets, since they stirred up not only the ancient fires of anti-Semitism, but the deeper fear of foreign and alien incursion. Thus, while few countries would do much to defend their own citizens, almost none would defend “stateless” Jews, and their expulsion was often taken as a boon, with little thought given to what might happen to the deportees at the other end of the train tracks, beneath the smoke and ash of the ovens at Buchenwald or Auschwitz. “After all,” thought the collaborating officials, “we can’t stir up trouble with the Germans, and these are not our people, anyway—we are not responsible for what happens to them beyond our borders.” Thus, the trains were loaded with elderly women and young boys, with babies held to the breast and young girls just coming into adulthood, with young men of working age and elders who had once served in the army of the Kaiser: all put on trains so as to clear out the “problems” of nations occupied by Nazi forces.

Of all the nations occupied by Germany in World War II, Arendt notes that Denmark alone refused all collaboration with the machinery of deportation and dehumanization. Indeed, from the king down, the Danes refused any cooperation with the racist policies that sought to isolate Jews—whether immigrants or native born—from the rest of the population. When the Nazis proposed even the “modest” move of requiring the wearing of the yellow star, they were told that the first to sew one on to his clothes would be the king himself, and in the face of such resistance, the Nazis backed down. While never rising up in armed revolt, the strength of the Danes in their resistance gradually won over the Germans who dwelt among them, so much so that when, in 1943, Hitler ordered Eichmann finally to round up the Jews of Denmark, the Nazi authorities did not believe that their own officials, stationed in Denmark, were trustworthy enough. Thus, they conceived a plan to bring in outside forces—Gestapo from Germany—to do the job. They would anchor ships in the harbor and, on Rosh Hashanah (Jewish New Year), strike the synagogues and homes of Danish and stateless Jews, rounding them up for deportation.

While Eichmann’s troops did not depend on Danish authorities, they did tell the leaders of the occupying German forces, who remarkably passed it along to the Danes. In that moment, unlike most countries in Europe, the Danish leaders and their citizens made a choice of passive but nearly universal resistance—spreading the word through synagogues and using the Danish fishing fleet to smuggle more than half of the Jewish population over to Sweden, a neutral country that, like Denmark, was willing to accept them. The other half of the Jews of Denmark remained, hidden by ordinary citizens until the end of the war—much to the disappointment of Eichmann and his masters.

The story of Denmark’s resistance is amazing for many reasons, not least of all for the role played by the German authorities in that country. Denmark is the only nation, occupied by the Germans, that showed such strong native resistance to the “final solution,” and the result was that it changed the heart of many of its occupiers, leading them to become saboteurs of the plans of their own government. Even the leader of the German occupation, who had been instrumental in aiding the work of genocide in other regions, seems to have been changed by the experience of Danish passive resistance, and at the end of the war was sentenced to only five years in jail, after a Danish court determined that he had tried to help, as much as he could. On trial in Jerusalem, Eichmann would accuse this man and others of disobedience—an accusation that seems to be justified, and which many of us would, perhaps, proudly bear.

In the last few months, in the United States, we have watched a rapid recommitment to the incarceration and summary deportation of undocumented women and men, boys and girls. Just last week, we saw the case of a 10 year old girl with cerebral palsy—who entered the United States from Mexico a decade ago—separated from her parents and taken into detention after gall bladder surgery. We have seen Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agents arrest parents who are dropping their children off at school, and women outside court houses as they sought to get restraining orders for domestic abuse. We have seen young children denied access to legal representation in immigration courts and sent back to dangerous places in El Salvador and Honduras—denied refugee status even though the dangers they will face are well established. In a time when 64 million refugees from around the world are pressing to find liberation from war and death, we have seen civil officials lower the number of refugees we will accept, declaring that we must care only about our own interests and security. Some of this is carried out by those who are strongly ideological, but we—caught up in the banality of this evil—cannot excuse ourselves. Like the Rich Man passing by Lazarus at the gate, we bear responsibility.

Perhaps, in the story of Denmark’s resistance to the supposedly inevitable and irresistible force of Nazism, there is a parable for our time. Evil, even when masked as banal and bourgeois, must always be resisted. If we, as women and men formed in the tradition of Christ Jesus, refuse to close our eyes, if we resist—passively but unwaveringly—the forces of fear and bureaucratic inertia, perhaps we can change the hearts of those who today are just doing what their job and the law calls them to do. Perhaps, like Denmark, we can open our companions to a deeper law, that lives in every human heart. And in doing so, we might yet save the lives of those in danger, those we know to be not “other” but truly our sisters and brothers.

Entrance Song

Here I Am, Lord

A great King am I, says the LORD of hosts, and my name will be feared among the nations. And now, O priests, this commandment is for you: If you do not listen, if you do not lay it to heart, to give glory to my name, says the LORD of hosts, I will send a curse upon you and of your blessing I will make a curse. You have turned aside from the way, and have caused many to falter by your instruction; you have made void the covenant of Levi, says the LORD of hosts.

First Reading

Malachi1:14b-2:2b, 8-10

I, therefore, have made you contemptible and base before all the people, since you do not keep my ways, but show partiality in your decisions. Have we not all the one father? Has not the one God created us? Why then do we break faith with one another, violating the covenant of our fathers?
Responsorial Psalm

Psalm 131

In you, O Lord, I have found my peace.

O LORD, my heart is not proud, nor haughty my eyes. I have not gone after things too great, nor marvels beyond me.

Truly, I have set my soul in tranquility and silence. As a weaned child on its mother, as a weaned child is my soul within me.

O Israel, wait for the LORD, both now and forever.

Second Reading

Brothers and sisters: We were gentle among you, as a nursing mother cares for her children. With such affection for you, we were determined to share with you not only the gospel of God, but our very selves as well, so dearly beloved had you become to us. You recall, brothers and sisters, our toil and drudgery. Working night and day in order not to burden any of you, we proclaimed to you the gospel of God.

And for this reason we too give thanks to God unceasingly, that, in receiving the word of God from hearing us, you received not a human word but, as it truly is, the word of God, which is now at work in you who believe.

Gospel Acclamation

Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia.

Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia.

Gospel

Jesus spoke to the crowds and to his disciples, saying, "The scribes and the Pharisees have taken their seat on the chair of Moses. Therefore, do and observe all things whatsoever they tell you, but do not follow their example. For they preach but they do not practice. They tie up heavy burdens hard to carry and lay them on people's shoulders, but they will not lift a finger to move them. All their works are performed to be seen. They widen their phylacteries and lengthen their tassels. They love places of honor at banquets, seats of honor in synagogues, greetings in marketplaces, and the salutation 'Rabbi.' As for you, do not be called 'Rabbi.' You have but one teacher, and you are all brothers. Call no one on earth your father; you have but one Father in heaven.

Do not be called 'Master'; you have but one master, the Christ. The greatest among you must be your servant. Whoever exalts himself will be humbled; but whoever humbles himself will be exalted."

Communion Songs

Psalm 16: You Will Show Me the Path Of Life

You will show me the path of life, you, my hope and my shelter; In your presence is endless joy, at your side is my home forever.

Faithful God, I look to you, you alone my life and fortune,
Never shall I look to other Gods, you shall be my one hope.

From of old you are my heritage, you my wisdom and my safety,
Through the night you speak within my heart, silently you teach me.

So my heart shall sing for joy, in your arms I rest securely,
you will not abandon me to death, you shall not desert me.

(5:30) 'Tis A Gift To Be Simple

Traditional Shaker

'Tis the gift to be simple, 'tis the gift to be free. 'Tis the gift to come down where we ought to be and when we find ourselves in the place just right, 'twill be in the valley of love and delight.

When true simplicity is gained to bow and to bend we shan't be ashamed; to turn, turn, will be our delight, till by turning, turning we come round right.
