Repentance from Fear

The Pilgrim also wanted to enter the house, and finding a sick man, he comforted him, touching his sore with his hand. After giving him some little consolation and encouragement, he went away alone. His hand now began to hurt, so that he thought he had the plague. This imagination was so vivid that he could not overcome it, until, with a forceful gesture he thrust his hand into his mouth, turning it about inside and saying, “If you have the plague in your hand, you shall also have it in your mouth.” When he had done this, the imagination left him and the pain in his hand as well.

The Autobiography of St. Ignatius

The secret to happiness is freedom... And the secret to freedom is courage.

-Thucydides-

In the early 1530’s, Iñigo de Loyola, who had lived for many years as a beggar and spiritual pilgrim, seemed to be on the way to a more peaceful—and some might say respectable—life. Since he was wounded at the battle of Pamplona, the young former courtesan had been little more than a vagabond, seeking, as he put it, to follow in the footsteps of St. Francis or St. Dominic. He had renounced his commission and his military honors, setting his sword and shield aside in a vigil at Montserrat, and had lived in a cave for many months in a little village near Barcelona called Manresa. Though something had changed for him during his months at Manresa, he remained, in the eyes of many, something of a crackpot—a religious zealot, who, for all his personal charm, was a bit dangerous to be around. Begging his passage, he had managed to make it to Jerusalem, where he had hoped to stay, but theFranciscans who supervised the Holy Sites had other ideas and ordered him out. Returning to Spain, he had begun studies at various schools, only to be called before the Inquisition on several occasions because of his tendency to attract others to his spiritual ideas—ideas that authorities worried might not be orthodox. Each time he had proven his innocence, usually after several days in jail, but had still been faced with restrictions that limited his ability to talk freely to others about matters of faith and morals. Finally, distressed by these limitations, he went to Paris, where he set about his studies in the college of St. Barbara. There, as he continued his formal studies, he also grew in his understanding of the work of the Spirit in his own heart, and of the power of light and dark that moved within him.

One day, accompanying a doctor friend to the home of a plague victim, Iñigo entered the house to give consolation to the man and his family. Yet, as he emerged from the home, and began to walk home to his rooms at the college, Iñigo became increasingly obsessed with the idea that his hand, which had touched the man’s wound, was now itself contaminated with plague. In that moment, as he walked the streets of Paris, all the needs and all the beauty of the city shrank away for him. He could not see the people who shared the streets with him: neither the poor who needed his help, nor the merchants in their stalls. He could not see the richness of that beautiful city: the river and the trees, the wonders of the afternoons sky, nor the bird flying above. He could not sense all that was given him: the opportunities that presented themselves, nor his own gifts and graces. He could not sense Christ present in the world nor “God in all things.” Trapped in fear, all he could see was himself: a man filled with anxiety and bound in a prison of his own making.

We can, perhaps, imagine Inigo in the streets of Paris: his head bowed down with worry, rubbing his hand and feeling the psychic pain, and growing more and more disturbed by his fear, more and more trapped in its power. But then he remembers, if only for an instant, the grace he had come to know so well, a grace that had led him through shipwreck and war, through sickness and near death; a grace and love that he knew transcended death, was deeper even than the grave. And in that moment, he found the courage to confront his fear head on, the courage to refuse to submit to the confinement this fear offered. Thrusting his hand into his mouth and rolling it around, he declared in his heart: “If you have the plague in your hand, you shall also have it in your mouth.” Suddenly, he was set free from his fear, and his life belonged to him again.

While the actions of Inigo may not offer us the greatest example of good hygiene, they offer an important image, I think, for this season of Advent—this season of hope and light, which comes to us in the midst of a world threatened by darkness and futility. For what Ignatius (as Inigo would later be known) recalled on the streets of Paris was that—more than any illness, more than any real danger or threat—it is fear that plagues our human nature, fear that imprisons us, fear that keeps us from opening ourselves in faith to the powerful gifts of God, and turns our hope for God’s kingdom into cautious self-absorption and debilitating despair. Fear blinds us in a way that only love and courage can cure.

Living in each of our hearts, fear acts like a viper that can bite us in a thousand different places. How many of us fail to speak out against prejudice or injustice from fear of being unpopular? How many of us join in the whispers of gossip or the degrading joke because we fear that, if we don’t, we might be next? How many voices have been silenced from the fear of not being believed, or the fear that a job will be lost or a label given? How many times has our fear that change will be too painful, or the fear that a job will be lost or a label given? How many voices have been silenced from the fear of not being believed, or the fear that a job will be lost or a label given? How many times has our fear of commitment kept us from loving, or our fear of being wrong kept us from risking ourselves for love? How many times has our fear of not being able to do everything kept us from doing anything? How often do we lose sight of reality, hiding behind titles or positions, behind notions of national sovereignty or personal privacy because we fear being caught in the suffering of others, fear that God will not be there for us, will not love us enough to sustain us, but will abandon us to our own pitiful condition?

In our fear we create separation and alienation from ourselves, from others, and from God. Like Ignatius on the streets of Paris, fear is a disease that closes our eyes, that strands us in the isolation which is essence of sin. When it controls our lives, fear robs us of passion and commitment, of light and hope, of great desires and joyous love. It leaves us seeking only the safe, the small, the reasonable demands of a faith that cannot comprehend the passion of the prophet in the desert nor the sacrifice of the Son of God hanging on the cross.

God does not call us to the safe, the small, the reasonable. God calls us to: “Go up onto the high mountain, and . . . cry out at the top of your voice.” God calls us to: “Prepare the way of the Lord, make straight his paths.” These are not words of compromise or resignation; they are not about safety nor caution: they are about overturning fear and expecting what we have no right to expect—that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, comes to live with us and abide with us. That we—each one of us, and all of us together, no matter how unworthy we may think ourselves to be—we are meant to be baptized with the Holy Spirit, and become part of “new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells.” Such belief, such courage and hope is what we are called to this Advent: it is what the gospel means when it speaks of repentance: not the pouring out of a laundry list of sins, but the acceptance of love and mission. In Advent, we repent, we turn towards our life, not by denying our fears, but by refusing to be imprisoned by them; by lighting our small candles, one week at a time, until the gathering flame pushes back the darkness and illumines our journey to hope.

Such repentance from fear and isolation may take many forms: perhaps it will be offering forgiveness when we are not certain it will be received; or reaching out to the poor and forgotten, when we don’t know what talents we have to bring. Perhaps repentance means trusting your children to God, even when it seems they have wandered from the Church; or perhaps it means opening the Church to those who feel that they have been pushed out. Perhaps repentance means resistance to unjust immigration enforcement, or standing at the side of refugees and displaced persons. Perhaps repentance means hearing the painful stories of abuse survivors, or telling your story to those who need to know. Perhaps repentance means overcoming the fear of failure and chaos that drives us to anxiety and obsession, and just letting God run the universe for awhile. Perhaps repentance is as silly as sticking your hand into your mouth, or as difficult as standing watch while a beloved one dies. But above all of these, repentance is opening ourselves in courage to the gifts that we are meant to receive: gifts of faith, of hope, and of love that are waiting for us in the heart of Mary’s child.

Entrance Song

Creator Of the Stars Of Night

Latin 9th C

1. Creator of the stars of night,
   In sorrow that the ancient curse
   When this old world drew on toward night,
   At your great Name, O Jesus, now
   Come in your holy might, we pray,
   To God Creator, God the Son,

2. Your people's everlasting light,
   Should come to death a universal verse,
   All knees must bend, all hearts must bow,
   Redeem us for eternal day;
   God the Spirit, Three in One,

3. O Christ, Redeemer of us all,
   You came, O Savior, to set free
   Not as a monarch, but the child
   Defend us while we dwell in cord;
   Praise, honor, might and glory be

4. We pray you hear us when we call,
   Your own in glorious liberty.
   Like those in heav'n, shall call you Lord.
   From all as saults of our dread foe.
   From age to age eternal.

Blessing The Advent Wreath

Penitential Act

I confess to almighty God and to you, my brothers and sisters, that I have greatly sinned, in my thoughts and in my words, in what I have done and in what I have failed to do, through my fault, through my fault, through my most grievous fault. therefore I ask blessed Mary ever-Virgin, all the Angels and Saints, and you, my brothers and sisters, to pray for me to the Lord our God.

Strike breast during next line.
First Reading

Comfort, give comfort to my people, says your God. Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and proclaim to her that her service is at an end, her guilt is expiated; indeed, she has received from the hand of the LORD double for all her sins.

A voice cries out: In the desert prepare the way of the LORD! Make straight in the wasteland a highway for our God! Every valley shall be filled in, every mountain and hill shall be made low; the rugged land shall be made a plain, the rough country, a broad valley. Then the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all people shall see it together; for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.

Responsorial Psalm

I will hear what the LORD God speaks; he speaks of peace for his people and his faithful. His salvation is near for those who fear him, and his glory will dwell in our land.

Merciful love and faithfulness have met; justice and peace have kissed.

Also the LORD will bestow his bounty, and our earth shall yield its increase.

Second Reading

Go up on to a high mountain, Zion, herald of glad tidings; cry out at the top of your voice, Jerusalem, herald of good news! Fear not to cry out and say to the cities of Judah: Here is your God! Here comes with power the Lord GOD, who rules by his strong arm; here is his reward before him. Like a shepherd he feeds his flock; in his arms he gathers the lambs, carrying them in his bosom, and leading the ewes with care.

Since everything is to be dissolved in this way, what sort of persons ought you to be, conducting yourselves in holiness and devotion, waiting for and hastening the coming of the day of God, because of which the heavens will be dissolved in flames and the elements melted by fire. But according to his promise we await new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells. Therefore, beloved, since you await these things, be eager to be found without spot or blemish before him, at peace.
The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God.

As it is written in Isaiah the prophet: Behold, I am sending my messenger ahead of you; he will prepare your way. A voice of one crying out in the desert: “Prepare the way of the Lord, make straight his paths.” John the Baptist appeared in the desert proclaiming a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins. People of the whole Judean countryside and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem were going out to him and were being baptized by him in the Jordan River as they acknowledged their sins. John was clothed in camel’s hair, with a leather belt around his waist. He fed on locusts and wild honey. And this is what he proclaimed: "One mightier than I is coming after me. I am not worthy to stoop and loosen the thongs of his sandals. I have baptized you with water; he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit."

Homily

Offertory Songs

Like A Shepherd #325

(9) Comfort, Comfort

Comfort, comfort now my people; tell of peace!” so says our God.
Comfort those who sit in darkness mourning under sorrow’s load.
To God’s people now proclaim that God’s pardon wait for them!
Tell them that their war is over; God will reign in peace forever!

For the herald’s voice is crying in the desert far and near calling us to true repentance since the kingdom now is here.

Oh that warning cry obey! Now prepare for God away!
Let the valleys rise to meet him and the hills bow down to greet him!

Straight shall be what long was crooked, and the rougher places plain!
Let your hearts be true and humble, as befits his holy reign!

For the glory of the Lord now on earth is shed abroad, and all flesh shall see the token that God’s word is never broken.
Holy, Holy, Holy

Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God of hosts. Heaven and earth are full of your glory.

Hosanna in the highest. Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.

Hosanna in the highest.

Mystery of Faith

When we eat this Bread and drink this Cup, we proclaim your Death, O Lord,

Isaiah addresses people who have passed through a dark period, who have been subjected to a very difficult trial; but now the time of comfort has come. Sorrow and fear can be replaced with joy, for the Lord himself will guide his people on the way to liberation and salvation. How will He do all this? With the solicitude and tenderness of a shepherd who takes care of his flock. He will in fact provide unity and security and feed his flock, gather the lost sheep into his sure fold, reserve special attention to the most fragile and weak (v. 11). This is God’s attitude toward us, his creatures. For this reason, the Prophet invites those who hear him — including us, today — to spread this message of hope: that the Lord consoles us. And to make room for the comfort which comes from the Lord.

We cannot be messengers of God’s comfort if we do not first feel the joy of being comforted and loved by Him. This happens especially when we hear his Word, the Gospel, which we should carry in our pocket: do not forget this! The Gospel in your pocket or purse, to read regularly. And this gives us comfort: when we abide in silent prayer in his presence, when we encounter Him in the Eucharist or in the Sacrament of Reconciliation. All this comforts us.

Let us therefore allow Isaiah’s call — “Comfort, comfort my people” — resound in our heart in this Season of Advent. Today there is need for people to be witnesses to the mercy and tenderness of God, who spurs the resigned, enlivens the disheartened, ignites the fire of hope. He ignites the fire of hope! We don’t. So many situations require our comforting witness. To be joyful, comforting people. I am thinking of those who are burdened by suffering, injustice and tyranny: of those who are slaves to money, to power, to success, to worldliness. Poor dears! They have fabricated consolation, not the true comfort of the Lord! We are all called to comfort our brothers and sisters, to testify that God alone can eliminate the causes of existential and spiritual tragedies. He can do it! He is powerful!

Isaiah’s message, which resounds in this second Sunday of Advent, is a salve on our wounds and an impetus to prepare with commitment the way of the Lord. Indeed, today the Prophet speaks to heart to tell us that God condones our sins and comforts us. If we entrust ourselves to Him with a humble and penitent heart, He will tear down the walls of evil, He will fill in the holes of our omissions, He will smooth over the bumps of arrogance and vanity, and will open the way of encounter with Him. It is curious, but many times we are afraid of consolation, of being comforted. Or rather, we feel more secure in sorrow and desolation. Do you know why? Because in sorrow we feel almost as protagonists. However, in consolation the Holy Spirit is the protagonist! It is He who consoles us, it is He who gives us the courage to go out of ourselves. It is He who opens the door to the source of every true comfort, that is, the Father. And this is conversion. Please, let yourselves be comforted by the Lord! Let yourselves be comforted by the Lord!
