Washing
Wash yourselves clean!
Put away your misdeeds from before my eyes;
cease doing evil;
learn to do good.
Make justice your aim: redress the wronged,
hear the orphan’s plea, defend the widow.
Come now, let us set things right, says the LORD:
Though your sins be like scarlet,
they may become white as snow;
Though they be red like crimson,
they may become white as wool.

-Isaiah 1: 16-18-

Recently, encountering this passage from Isaiah in the readings of the morning Mass, I was transported back to my first week of college. In those days, parents did not fly across the country to make sure their children were comfortably situated in an appropriately decorated dorm room—especially if you happened to be the last of five heading off to college. Instead, my father gave me some money and told me to take care of myself, as I got on the airplane at SFO and headed off to Washington, DC. The next thing I remember was walking into my tiny room in what, during the 1890’s, had been the Georgetown Hospital. My room had once been a part of a larger room, which housed three students, but someone thought it would be more desirable to have singles, and so walls had been put in to divide the room as simply and cheaply as possible—which meant I could touch both walls of my little monk’s cell at the same time, just by spreading my arms. Across the room, next to the old wooden window, was the bed: a metal spring bed that may have been from the original hospital, on which an old woolen mattress was rolled up at one end. Though I wondered, at this point, what I had gotten myself into, I dropped my luggage, unrolled the mattress and sat down—bouncing and squeaking a little as I did. The next day, determined not to use the paper-thin sheets and burlap-like towel I had found in my room, I went out to find some new sheets and towels—and when I came home from the mall, I had what every 18 year old boy in 1976 would take to be the height of sophistication: some beautiful, maroon sheets with matching pillowcases and towel. Suddenly, life seemed a bit better, and I grabbed my laundry and headed to the basement to wash the sheets before putting them on my bed. Since it was expensive to do laundry—$.50 for a load—I decided to take all the other laundry I had, as well, and do it together. Thus, about 45 minutes later, I had a soft new set of sheets and a new collection of pink socks and boxer shorts. I also had my first lesson from college: things run.

If you are like me, you want to believe that the dark things of the world are somehow color-fast, that they will stay where they are and remain discreet. But the truth is that in the warm waters of our lives, things rarely keep their dyes to themselves. The dark feelings of fear and anger, of hurt and hatred, of desperation and anxiety bleed into even our most pure intentions, or leave bleach stains on our brightest hopes. Our lives may not be scarlet with sin or crimson with evil, but they can bear the pink cast of the hypocrite or the grey stain of the passive aggressive. Nor is this bleeding limited to our own sins and anxieties, to the things that we have thrown into the mix; for it includes, as well, all those works and sorrows that others have thrown into the wash. Amid the agitation of the world, our hearts are stained by the wars in Iraq and Syria, in Congo and Somalia; stained by afflictions that push refugees to the shores of Europe, and by the racism that drives them from the continent. We are stained in smalls ways and large by all the colors of suffering and sin: by the death of children in Florida and the trafficking of women in the Libyan desert; by the hunger of children whose parents are deported and the shame of survivors who were abused in the Church. Though we may think of these things as “other than us,” though we may try to believe that in them we have no role nor responsibility, still, we bear their mark, and their darkness mars the purity of our lives. We are not discreet beings, separated out like well-managed laundry—and no amount of privilege or denial can make us so. Rather, we are part of a great, unruly pile—stained by sin and savagery, by the choices we have made and by the choices others have made for us. And though we may try to withdraw behind gates of wealth and power, behind myths of racial purity or political ideology, behind religious fundamentalism or overweening narcissism; though we may try to clothe ourselves in our virtue or our independence, we need only open our eyes to see how stained and tarnished are all the garments that we wear.

Marked both by our own personal sins and failures and by the communal and social sins that mar our world, it is easy for us to become discouraged and disheartened. Even when we manage, through prayer and penance, to be more personally grounded in God’s love and mercy, we look around and see so much that seems beyond our control. What are we to do to heal 17 years of war, and the human damage it has left behind? How are we to overcome the specter of racism and the vast problem of displaced persons? How can we cleanse our culture of the addiction to money, which gives power to faceless gun manufacturers and turns even normally good public servants into weak and petty persons? How do we stand, unblemished, amid the constant lies—petty and grand—that come from the President, or stay clean when all truth seems soiled by bias and spin?

Yet, this is precisely where God enters. As St. Paul says, “For our sake he made him to be sin, who did not know sin, so that we might become the righteous of God in him” (2 Cor. 5:22). Jesus Christ does not wait for the world to become pure, but immerses himself in its muck and mire, in all the stains that surround us, and all the forces that would break our hearts. He enters the world of sin, without ever giving up his purity—a purity he wears as a seamless garment, made from transforming hope, from active faith, and from a love that leads him even to the anguish of the cross. Here he hangs naked, pouring out his blood into the waters of the world, and purifying the world through his forgiveness of our sins. In the mercy that flows from this moment of sin’s great triumph, Jesus reminds us that, for all the stains and tatters of our history, we have been clothed in a covenant of grace and love that nothing can overcome. We have been washed in the waters of mercy and the blood of the Lamb, to which all the stains of sin cannot adhere.

So, let us, then, refuse to be discouraged, for we are already being purified. Let us resist the tides of hatred and violence, of sin and small-mindedness, of constant deception and manufactured outrage. Let us, instead, live the words of Isaiah, ceasing to do evil, learning to do good, hearing the orphan’s plea, and defending the widow. Let us stand up together and set things right, proclaiming a truth that knows no stain, that cannot be overcome by the dyes and decepts of this current age: all of us are sisters and brothers; all of us are washed in the same bath of love; all of us are called to a share in the kingdom—both its goods and its labors; and all of us are children of the same gracious God!

Though your sins be like scarlet, they may become white as snow; Though they be red like crimson, they may become white as wool.

Marked both by our own personal sins and failures and by the communal and social sins that mar our world, it is easy for us to become discouraged and disheartened. Even when we manage, through prayer and penance, to be more personally grounded in God’s love and mercy, we look around and see so much that seems beyond our control. What are we to do to heal 17 years of war, and the human damage it has left behind? How are we to overcome the specter of racism and the vast problem of displaced persons? How can we cleanse our culture of the addiction to money, which gives power to faceless gun manufacturers and turns even normally good public servants into weak and petty persons? How do we stand, unblemished, amid the constant lies—petty and grand—that come from the President, or stay clean when all truth seems soiled by bias and spin?

St. Joseph Community extends its prayers and hopes for the following intentions: For a family who are planning a memorable 90th birthday for their mother . . . For Mary who is having knee replacement surgery . . . For Spring to happen in Seattle . . . For Al and Kris’s safe travel abroad . . . Thank you St. Joseph parishioners for your caring and kindness in supporting the Winter Overnight Shelter . . . Also, your generosity to St. Francis House has helped to provide food for many.

“Take care of brothers and sisters who are weaker . . . the elderly, the sick, the hungry, the homeless and strangers, because we will be judged on this.”

~Pope Francis
I confess to almighty God and to you, my brothers and sisters, that I have greatly sinned, in my thoughts and in my words, in what I have done and in what I have failed to do, through my fault, through my fault, through my most grievous fault. Therefore I ask blessed Mary ever-Virgin, all the Angels and Saints, and you, my brothers and sisters, to pray for me to the Lord our God.
First Reading

In those days, in their thirst for water, the people grumbled against Moses, saying, “Why did you ever make us leave Egypt? Was it just to have us die here of thirst with our children and our livestock?” So Moses cried out to the LORD, “What shall I do with this people? A little more and they will stone me!” The LORD answered Moses, “Go over there in front of the people, along with some of the elders of Israel, holding in your hand, as you go, the staff with which you struck the river. I will be standing there in front of you on the rock in Horeb. Strike the rock, and the water will flow from it for the people to drink.” This Moses did, in the presence of the elders of Israel. The place was called Massah and Meribah, because the Israelites quarreled there and tested the LORD, saying, “Is the LORD in our midst or not?”

Responsorial Psalm

Psalm 95

If to-day you hear God’s voice, hard-en not your hearts.

1. Come, ring out our joy to the Lord. Hail the Rock who saves us.
   Let us come now before our God. With songs let us hail the Lord.

2. Come, let us bow and bend low. Let us kneel before God who made us, for here is our God, we the people, the flock that is led by God’s hand.

3. O that today you would hear God’s voice, “Harden not your hearts, as on that day in the desert, when your parents put me to the test.”

Second Reading

Brothers and sisters: Since we have been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have gained access by faith to this grace in which we stand, and we boast in hope of the glory of God.

And hope does not disappoint, because the love of God has been poured out into our hearts through the Holy Spirit who has been given to us. For Christ, while we were still helpless, died at the appointed time for the ungodly. Indeed, only with difficulty does one die for a just person, though perhaps for a good person one might even find courage to die. But God proves his love for us in that while we were still sinners Christ died for us.

Gospel Acclamation

Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ. King of endless glory!
Gospel
Jesus came to a town of Samaria called Sychar, near the plot of land that Jacob had given to his son Joseph. Jacob’s well was there. Jesus, tired from his journey, sat down there at the well. It was about noon.

A woman of Samaria came to draw water. Jesus said to her, “Give me a drink.” His disciples had gone into the town to buy food. The Samaritan woman said to him, “How can you, a Jew, ask me, a Samaritan woman, for a drink?” — For Jews use nothing in common with Samaritans.— Jesus answered and said to her, “If you knew the gift of God and who is saying to you, ‘Give me a drink,’ you would have asked him and he would have given you living water.” The woman said to him, “Sir, you do not even have a bucket and the cistern is deep; where then can you get this living water? Are you greater than our father Jacob, who gave us this cistern and drank from it himself with his children and his flocks?” Jesus answered and said to her, “Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again; but whoever drinks the water I shall give will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life.” The woman said to him, “Sir, give me this water, so that I may not be thirsty or have to keep coming here to draw water.”

Jesus said to her, “Go call your husband and come back.” The woman answered and said to him, “I do not have a husband.” Jesus answered her, “You are right in saying, ‘I do not have a husband.’ For you have had five husbands, and the one you have now is not your husband. What you have said is true.” The woman said to him, “Sir, I can see that you are a prophet. Our ancestors worshiped on this mountain; but you people say that the place to worship is in Jerusalem.” Jesus said to her, “Believe me, woman, the hour is coming when you will worship the Father neither on this mountain nor in Jerusalem. You people worship what you do not understand; we worship what we understand, because salvation is from the Jews. But the hour is coming, and is now here, when true worshipers will worship the Father in Spirit and truth; and indeed the Father seeks such people to worship him. God is Spirit, and those who worship him must worship in Spirit and truth.” The woman said to him, “I know that the Messiah is coming, the one called the Christ; when he comes, he will tell us everything.” Jesus said to her, “I am he, the one speaking with you.”

At that moment his disciples returned, and were amazed that he was talking with a woman, but still no one said, “What are you looking for?” or “Why are you talking with her?” The woman left her water jar and went into the town and said to the people, “Come see a man who told me everything I have done. Could he possibly be the Christ?” They went out of the town and came to him. Meanwhile, the disciples urged him, “Rabbi, eat.” But he said to them, “I have food to eat of which you do not know.” So the disciples said to one another, “Could someone have brought him something to eat?” Jesus said to them, “My food is to do the will of the one who sent me and to finish his work. Do you not say, ‘In four months the harvest will be here?’ I tell you, look up and see the fields ripe for the harvest. The reaper is already receiving payment and gathering crops for eternal life, so that the sower and reaper can rejoice together. For here the saying is verified that ‘One sows and another reaps.’ I sent you to reap what you have not worked for; others have done the work, and you are sharing the fruits of their work.”

Many of the Samaritans of that town began to believe in him because of the word of the woman who testified, “He told me everything I have done.” When the Samaritans came to him, they invited him to stay with them; and he stayed there two days. Many more began to believe in him because of his word, and they said to the woman, “We no longer believe because of your word; for we have heard for ourselves, and we know that this is truly the savior of the world.”

A Lenten Day of Reflection for Women
With Olivia Woodford

The Passion of Christ Comes To Life Through the Eyes of the Women who Loved Jesus

St. Joseph’s Women’s Ministry invites you to our Lenten Day of Reflection featuring Olivia ‘s performance of her one-woman play “The Heart of the Cross.” Her presentation will transport us back in time to the foot of the Cross to experience Jesus’ Death and Resurrection through the eyes of the women who witnessed these events.

The performance will be presented in in three sections. Between each section, we will discuss related scripture and explore the role of women in Jesus’ ministry. Contemplation and discussion time will focus on how the faith of Veronica, Mary Magdalene, Jesus’ Mother Mary, and Martha inspire us and how their lives and actions are meaningful to our life today as Christian women.

Come join us in awakening the spirit of the Lenten season in our hearts and minds as we engage the love, faith, and compassion of of the gospel women and the personal awakenings they experienced from being close to Jesus.

The Ignatian Spirituality Center invites you to take one hour a day for a Lenten retreat in daily life.

Nine Days of Grace: Novena 2018

Are you looking for a Lenten practice to help you grow closer to God and others? The ISC invites you to be part of our upcoming Nine Days of Grace entitled “Open our Eyes, Show Us Your Face.”

What will I experience during these Nine Days of Grace? This Lenten retreat can be made amid the busyness of daily life. Take just one hour a day for any or all of the nine days; or make the retreat online. Depending on which is most convenient, choose either Seattle U’s Chapel of St. Ignatius during the day or St. Joseph Church in the evening (1:00 pm on weekends). In the context of the Eucharist, you will experience stirring preaching given by a team of three Ignatian-inspired presenters, the assembly’s powerful prayers of petition, beautiful ritual music, and optional individual prayers for healing at the end. It draws an inspiring community of people from all ages and faith backgrounds. Many experience a palpable sense of the Spirit and of abundant graces that stays with them long after the retreat is over.

What is a Novena? The Novena’s origins date to 1633, when St. Francis Xavier appeared to the priest Marcellus Mastrilli in a healing vision and promised that all who would earnestly ask his intercession with God for nine days would experience profound grace. Although the term “Novena” may sound like an outdated ritual irrelevant to contemporary life, it survives today as an annual tradition, continually updated and relevant to the daily lives of those who participate.

Why “Open our Eyes, Show Us Your Face”? In what might seem like “dark times” in our country and in our lives, we can easily lose sight of a deeper reality and truth—that the Light has come into the world and continues to be at work in our hearts, in our face-to-face relationships, in our local communities, in people of good will working toward justice, and in the world over the long arc of history. Inspired by the scripture readings for the Nine Days of Grace, this year’s retreat team—Fr. Trung Pham, S.J., Victoria Ries and Joe Hastings—recognized that if we let our eyes be opened, we can come to see God’s face in these glimpses of light and hints of the kingdom present here and now.

If you are new to or familiar with this retreat, we hope you will consider entering into it this Lent, responding to God’s personal invitation to open our eyes and see God face to face. Feel free to invite someone else to experience the abundant graces of this Lenten retreat as well!
Faith Justice

Book Group

Please join the St. Joseph Racial Justice in America Book Group for study, reflection and opportunities for action and solidarity on issues of race in America. Our first meeting of the year will be March 6th at 7 pm in the Parish Center, during which we will choose our reading list for the year. Come with ideas for books to discuss, an open heart, and willingness to be challenged. We are particularly encouraging men in the parish to participate. This group provides a safe space for the exploration and discussion of difficult issues, with the ultimate goal of discovering for each of us how to live the Gospel message in light of the sin of racism so alive in our country today. Please email Mary de Rosas at mderosas@pnwimmigration.com for more information. We look forward to you joining us!

Young Adults

Service Day Project—March 10th 9:00am-1:00pm

Join your fellow young adults for our fall service project by supporting St. Vincent de Paul (SVdP) to benefit their Kenmore retail store. For this indoor project, we will assist the SVdP Kenmore Store staff with re-organization and general clean up of donated items. SVdP heavily relies on a volunteer workforce, so this is a great way for us to help SVdP better provide for those most in need. This is also a great opportunity to do some spring cleaning and donate some of your stuff that isn't getting used! Please contact Patrick at pmireur@gmail.com with questions and to RSVP.

Game Night! Fri, March 16th - 6:00 pm - Parish Center

Join us for our monthly social where you'll be anything but bored. We'll have some classics like Settlers of Catan, Ticket to Ride, and card games as well as some newer games to knock your socks off! Competition not your thing? Come try out the cooperative game Pandemic. Did you stock up on any new games recently? Feel free to bring it along! Food will be provided, feel free to bring a drink to share. RSVP via Facebook or contact Corbin at corbin.s.johnson@gmail.com
