In love he destined us for adoption to himself through Jesus Christ, in accord with the favor of his will, for the praise of the glory of his grace that he granted us in the beloved.
Out of the Pit

Israel loved Joseph best of all his sons, for he was the child of his old age; and he had made him a long ornamented tunic. When his brothers saw that their father loved him best of all his brothers, they hated him so much that they could not say a kind word to him.

-Genesis 37:3-4-

I know a man of such / mildness and kindness it is trying to change my life. He does not / preach, teach, but simply is. It is astonishing, for he is Christ’s ambassador / truly, by rule and act.

-Mary Oliver-

A few months ago, feeling a little worn-down by the craziness of the world, I turned on one of those action-adventure movies that always promise to distract. This one, Behind Enemy Lines, starred Owen Wilson and tells the story of an American pilot, shot down in Bosnia during the war there, who is trying to escape Serbian nationalists who believe he has seen their war crimes. Most of the movie is pretty standard fare: Wilson running through the forest, pursued by dark, menacing, Eastern-European looking men. But one scene still sticks in my memory. It’s raining and Wilson is (of course) running through the forest, when he slips on some mud, slides into a ravine and lands on his face. As he pulls himself up, smeared with wet mud, he looks around him and everywhere are corpses—men, women, children, all around him. He has fallen into one of the mass graves so well known in the Bosnian war, that had not yet been covered up. Revolted, but fearful of giving himself away, Wilson lies there, among the dead bodies, until the patrol moves past.

In a relatively predictable movie, the scene is haunting, both for what it says about our world, and for its symbolic implications. How many mass graves have been dug since those years in Bosnia? How many thousands of Serbs and Croats, Syrians and Iraqis, Nigerian and Sudanese, Hondurans and Salvadorans lie, undiscovered—though not unmourned—across the earth? But, even more than the horror of these actual deaths, the image of Wilson, hiding amid the corpses—bound to them, dependent in some way upon them—seems a powerful metaphor of our age and of our own situation. For like the pilot in this movie, we, too, seem to have fallen, in our fear, into a pit, filled with dead things—with envy and pride, with self-righteousness and greed—all of which we think will protect us, and from which we find it hard to escape.

For many of us, envy seems like a minor vice—a small disorder, that is, perhaps, even a bit childish: we wish we had Bill Gates’ money, or imagine what we could do with Oprah’s fame; we resent our neighbors’ child who gets into a better school than our child, or grumble at a relative who goes on a trip to Hawaii (“Yeah, but they don’t have any kids, like we do!”). Petty complaints, and beneath us, perhaps, but not great sins. Yet, in saying that, I think we underestimate envy; we minimize the resentment that so often accompanies it, and forget how closely it is tied to other disorders, like fear and hatred. For real envy is not just about wishing we had something someone else has, it is about all the ways we compare ourselves to others—
or, rather, to our idea of others—and so bind ourselves to these corpses that come from own our minds and our hearts. Embracing such comparisons, living among them, blinds us to our own gifted reality, and feeds our fear of others and our alienation from them. We do not see real people, but only our own unfulfilled desires, our own imagined fears. Defining ourselves always in comparison to others, we envy those whom we think have more—more money, more power, more happiness, etc.—and we fear those whom we imagine want what we have—our jobs, our homes, our nation. We create, in our minds and hearts, an imaginary world of “them”
and “us,” a world where everything is a zero-sum game and for anyone else to rise, I must fall. In such a world, we no longer seek Truth, but only our truth, i.e., a truth shaped by our fears and resentments, a truth that reinforces our own biases and world-view. In this pit, we live among these dead things, born of our own mind, and fear getting away from them, since without them we will have no value, no measure, no identity.

The odious effects of envy are nothing new, but may be found in the story of Joseph, in the book of Genesis. In this story, the love that Israel has for his son, Joseph, is seen as a threat by Joseph’s brothers. Rather than accepting the love their father has for them, they resent the love given to Joseph, and they seek to take that love back by killing Joseph or selling him into slavery. In this text, we see that it is not the real Joseph that the brothers hate, it is their idea of Joseph, created in comparison to themselves, that oppresses their minds and their hearts.
Controlled by a sense that, because their father loves Joseph, there is less love for them, they become obsessed with improving themselves by destroying this “other” this idea of Joseph who keeps them from the value for which they long. Nowhere in the story is there a sense that Israel does not love all his sons, but they are caught by their own comparisons, and bound to a dead and death-dealing notion that crushes their hearts, a disordered attachment that keeps them from living fully and brings them deeper and deeper into the pit of death.

This experience of living our lives in comparison to our ideas of others—whether manifested as envy or self-righteousness—is pernicious and widespread, emerging in both personal behaviors and in our political policies.
How many young women are starving themselves today be as thin as some air-brushed fashion model; how many millions of dollars are spent on liposuction and Cialis, all because we fear being older than the other or less virile than “the competition”? How much time is spent watching what others are doing, measuring our own performance against theirs? Or evaluating our own programs by how many medals we won, in comparison to our competitors? How much of our policy towards immigrants is shaped by our sense that we are better than them, or our fear that their success must mean our failure? Rather than seeing our own blessings and wanting to live and grow in solidarity with others, we see only our ideas of these others—giving their lives meaning only in light of our fears and needs, our emptiness and wishes.

Such pernicious comparisons can be subtle, as when we talk about college rankings as a tool of evaluation, or popularity as a measure of success; and they can even be inverted, as when we diminish our own suffering because others have it worse. And they can be deadly, as when we close the door to refugees from certain countries because we have determined that they are less than us, or when we need to prove our value and our power by conquering other nations. In all these ways, we hide ourselves amid corpses to feel safe, seeking to create our identity by invalidating the identity of others, seeking to appear taller by knocking someone else down. And, all we are doing is binding ourselves to corpses of our own making, whose being is a judgment and a threat to us. Thus, we cast ourselves into a pit of the dead, and stay there because we are afraid to move, afraid to be detected by what we fear is a hostile and hidden truth.

But, Jesus Christ comes not to bring death, but to bring life. To raise us out of the pit of skeletons and corpses in which we are lost, to free us from all the comparisons that mar our vision and bind us in fear. Christ comes to set us free, by seeing us as we are, and by helping us to see ourselves and one another with God’s loving vision.
The Indian Jesuit, Anthony de Mello, put it this way: “Behold God, beholding you, and smiling.” Only in this way can we climb out of the pit of corpses in which we have hidden ourselves, a pit we seem to make bigger with each passing day, with each act of anger and fear.

This is our liberation from the odious prison of comparisons. For in the gaze of God, we will, at last, see ourselves as we are: beloved though imperfect, free in ourselves and yet bound to every other person, to every other part of reality. In the love of God, given through Christ Jesus—a love which which is Spirit and life—we are no longer more or less, closer to or farther from, stronger, taller, shorter, smarter or more foolish than any other person; but we are ourselves, entire. Each one of us the “beloved disciple” laying our head on the breast of Christ, or standing at the foot of his cross. Each one of us bathed in the liberating and redeeming gaze of love—which knows neither limit nor comparison—and which leads us, step by step, from acceptance to gratitude, from gratitude to generosity, and from generosity to communion with all the men and women of the world.

Psalm 85

Responsorial Psalm

Psalm 85

Lord, let us see your kindness; and grant us your salvation.
I will hear what the LORD God speaks; he speaks of peace for his people and his faithful.
His salvation is near for those who fear him, and his glory will dwell in our land.

Merciful love and faithfulness have met; justice and peace have kissed.
Faithfulness shall spring from the earth, and justice look down from heaven.

Also the LORD will bestow his bounty, and our earth shall yield its increase.
Justice will march before him, and guide his steps on the way.

Second Reading

Ephesians 1:3-14

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us in Christ with every spiritual blessing in the heavens, as he chose us in him, before the foundation of the world, to be holy and without blemish before him.
In love he destined us for adoption to himself through Jesus Christ, in accord with the favor of his will, for the praise of the glory of his grace that he granted us in the beloved. In him we have redemption by his blood, the forgiveness of transgressions, in accord with the riches of his grace that he lavished upon us. In all wisdom and insight, he has made known to us the mystery of his will in accord with his favor that he set forth in him as a plan for the fullness of times, to sum up all things in Christ, in heaven and on earth.

In him we were also chosen, destined in accord with the purpose of the One who accomplishes all things according to the intention of his will, so that we might exist for the praise of his glory, we who first hoped in Christ. In him you also, who have heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, and have believed in him, were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit, which is the first installment of our inheritance toward redemption as God's possession, to the praise of his glory.

Mark 6:7-13

Jesus summoned the Twelve and began to send them out two by two and gave them authority over unclean spirits. He instructed them to take nothing for the journey but a walking stick— no food, no sack, no money in their belts. They were, however, to wear sandals but not a second tunic. He said to them, “Wherever you enter a house, stay there until you leave. Whatever place does not welcome you or listen to you, leave there and shake the dust off your feet in testimony against them.” So they went off and preached repentance. The Twelve drove out many demons, and they anointed with oil many who were sick and cured them.

Communion Song

Here I Am, Lord

Schutte

1. I, the Lord of sea and sky,
   I have heard my people cry.
2. I, the Lord of snow and rain,
   I have borne my people's pain.
3. I, the Lord of wind and flame,
   I will tend the poor and lame.

All who dwell in dark and sin,
   My hand will save.
I have wept for love of them.
   They turn away.
I will set a feast for them.
   My hand will save.

I who made the stars of night,
   I will make their darkness bright.
I will break their hearts of stone,
   Give them hearts for love alone.
Finest bread I will provide,
   Till their hearts be satisfied.

Who will bear my light to them?
   Whom shall I send?
I will speak my word to them.
   Whom shall I send?
I will give my life to them.
   Whom shall I send?

Here I am, Lord. Is it I, Lord?
   I have heard you calling in the night.
I will go, Lord, if you lead me.

I will hold your people in my heart.
Closing Song

(5&9:30) God Sends Us Forth

1. God sends us forth to love and serve.
2. Nourished by Christ, our Word and Bread.
3. Called to the ones the world ignores—
4. So, with the cross to lead the way,

Make known God’s name and live God’s word.
Burn ing with love and Spirit led,
Hungry and thirsty, weak and poor—
Let us go forth in peace today.

Mirror God’s love, reflect God’s grace Till Sent to embrace a world in need, To Let us bear Christ, who heals all pain And
And to the ends of earth make known The all have seen the Savior’s face.

make God known in word and deed.
comforts those bowed down by shame.
saving love our God has shown.

Help Needed!
CAR NEEDED FOR OUR SYRIAN REFUGEE FAMILY DONATION OR FOR PURCHASE

Our Syrian refugee family, Kareem, Katryn and Jacob are in desperate need of a used car either for purchase or as a donation. Kareem has generously assisted us on so many occasions with translation and support of our other refugee family from Iraq. This is an immediate need. If you can help, please contact Deacon Steve at 206-965-1646 or stevew@stjosephparish.org

Come Pray With Us!
Monday Night Prayer Groups

Join us in prayer on Monday, July 16th at 7 pm. There are two prayer groups meeting. Join our Sacred Silence prayer group in the Church or come pray the Rosary in the Parish Center Chapel.

The Sacred Silence prayer group will gather in the church for an hour of silent prayer. Please arrive before 7 pm as the doors are locked right at 7. For information, contact Jim Hoover at sacredsilence@stjosephparish.org or 206-286-0313.

Praying the Rosary can help us face the often harsh realities of life with hope and grace. People will help guide those who are just learning.

St. Joseph Community extends its prayers and hopes for the following intentions: For Virginia’s back to be better . . . For Paul’s future . . . Thanksgiving for the many prayers and to the amazing teams from around the world who rescued the young soccer team and their coach in Thailand from the flooded caves.

“To give light to them that sit in darkness . . .
To guide our feet into the way of peace.”

St. Martin de Porres

Volunteers Needed - St. Joseph provides a meal to the men at St. Martin de Porres Shelter every Saturday night. We have four teams, one for each week. We are looking for parishioners to join the team.

Here’s how you can help:
1. Serve at the shelter (5:45pm – 8:15pm)
2. Contribute Food Items: Milk, Ice Cream, Fruit, Hard-Boiled Eggs, Sandwiches, Hot Dogs, Lasagna etc. varies from team to team.

We usually serve between 150 and 220 men a night. The biggest need are servers on the 2nd Saturday and food contributors on the 1st Saturday. This is a great opportunity to serve as a family or with a group of friends. We have a special 5th Saturday team that also helps out whenever a 5th Saturday pops up on the calendar. If you would like to learn more or volunteer contact Deacon Steve at stjoseph@stjosephparish.org or 206-965-1646.

We still need help, please consider joining a team!

Spiritual Exercises In Everyday Life

Do you desire to draw nearer to a God who desires to draw nearer to you?

The Spiritual Exercises in Everyday Life (SEEL) is a nine month retreat format of the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius of Loyola with a retreat community meeting here at St. Joseph. The SEEL retreat goes from September through May and is a powerful, life-changing program of prayer and reflection that can be done by busy people in the midst of their daily lives. Retreatants commit themselves to praying daily, meeting twice monthly with a Spiritual Director, and to attending monthly Saturday retreat days. SEEL is accepting applications now for the retreat starting in September of 2018. Learn more at our website at www.seelpugetsound.org or call SEEL at 206-721-3518. Many retreatants describe SEEL as a transforming experience!

There will be a brief information session to give more details and answer questions about the SEEL retreat on Sunday, July 29th after 9:30 am and 5:30 pm Masses in the Parish Center. If you would like to join us, an RSVP is encouraged by emailing/calling Deacon Steve at 206-965-1646 or stevew@stjosephparish.org
